Delta loss weighs on industrials in week opener...

The market's top stock Delta continued its slide post the release of its third quarter trading update to weigh on the market, the company reported declines in revenues and volumes for Q3. In today's call Delta succumbed 1.62% and closed at a volume weighted average price of $0.9002 having touched an intraday low of $0.9000 where demand could be established. Weighed down by Delta, the benchmark Industrial Index shed 0.41% for the day and ended at 144.42pts with the market seemingly in free-fall. The loss of the day was mitigated by a single riser, in Padenga, as the market closed with no breadth. The crocodile skin producer gained 2.80% and ended at $0.1650 where it was well bid. Meanwhile, the Mining index was flat at 54.56pts as there was no activity in the cluster.

Activity aggregates were much improved for the day despite a seemingly slow session in which a mere seven counters were active. Volumes went up 78.8% at 1.3m shares as values surged 688% to $0.63m. Delta was the market favorite leading on both the volumes and values of the day where it drove 42.6% and 80.83% respectively. Capital flight from the market continued as the day registered nil purchases against disposals of $0.53m setting a net funds outflow position.
